

An Artist Statement:

Of course, it is not easy to express in words a creative work.

A statement must be clearly and concisely presented to enable the reader to easily grasp the nature of your work, discern your intention and to evaluate its relevance in relation to your personal creative development.

Choose one of your photography projects (any class). Look at the project you wish to discuss. Answer the following questions in this order. We usually work in the opposite order, but the viewer is interested in concrete information about the work:

1. Give a description of your project.
2. Give some details about your techniques and how they help you achieve your objectives.
3. How is your approach unique?
4. Explain what your work means to you (specifically):
5. How are your ideas and concerns revealed in your work?

Edit your answers into a statement in a few paragraphs (not point form) Less is more as long as it is precise and to the point.

(300-500 words) You may include illustrations, in fact they will help clarify your statement to the reader.
